SCHOOL WARRANT.

To the Inhabitants of the School District of the Town of Hudson, qualified to vote in district affairs :

You are hereby notified to meet at the Town House, in said District, on Tuesday, the 18th day of March, 1890, at 1 o'clock in the afternoon, to act upon the following subjects :

1. To choose a moderator for the ensuing year.
2. To choose a clerk for the ensuing year.
3. To choose a member of the school board for the ensuing three years.
4. To hear the reports of agents, auditors, committees or officers heretofore chosen, and pass any vote relating thereto.
5. To choose agents, auditors or committees in relation to any subject embraced in this warrant.
6. To see what sum of money the district will vote to raise for the support of schools in addition to the amount required by law.
7. To see what sum of money the district will vote to raise for building, repairing, or furnishing school houses, or other necessary out buildings, or in any way to keep in repair or improve the school property of the district.

Given under our hands at said Hudson, this 27th day of February, 1890.

D. O. SMITH,
KIMBALL WEBSTER, } School Board.

REPORT OF THE SCHOOL BOARD.

Another school year has passed and left its impress upon the susceptible minds of our youth. Hence, it once more becomes our duty to submit you the annual report. If all the wise sayings and admonitions contained in the reports of the last three or five decades were collected in one volume, it would be of no mean dimensions. It is to be hoped, and we can but believe, that the seed thus sown has been productive of good results. It seems to be a well recognized fact that human nature, morally, physically and intellectually, requires “line upon line” and “precept upon precept,” in order to develop and preserve a healthful amount of excitation, even if it be but a repetition of the “old, old story.”

SCHOOLS.

Eight schools have been supported, each having three terms of ten weeks, excepting Nos. 3 and 4, in which the third term was shortened one week,—the latter by reason of sickness of the teacher, and the former by the presence of diphtheria in the district. We much regret that the faithful and efficient labors of the teachers of these schools could not have been exhibited at a public or closing examination.

It now seems impracticable to lessen the number, and the patience, sagacity and wisdom of our citizens are liable at no distant day to be severely tested in the prevention or satisfactory adjustment of an increase. Seasonable and deliberate thought upon this matter may assist in the formation of judicious conclusions in regard to the present and prospective wants of the citizens in No. 6, embracing, perhaps, the feasibility of consolidating a portion of the two schools, Nos. 4 and 6, or some other scheme which will best subserve the general and local interests of the community.

SCHOOL HOUSES.

As a result of the liberal appropriation by the town a commodious, substantially constructed house, with all the necessary outbuildings, has been erected in No. 2, upon or near the site of the old one.

This was a much-needed improvement, highly creditable to the town, and apparently well appreciated by the pupils and those directly interested in the school. A detailed report of the expenditures will doubtless be rendered at the annual school meeting.

The house in No. 7 should have some internal repairs, new doors and inside painting being the most essential. Papering the walls would be a cheap and quite effective way of improving the appearance and giving support to the fissured plastering. Whoever has given one look at the immediate surroundings of school house No. 5, cannot but be in favor of effecting a change that will make the locality at least respectable. The present condition is a foul stigma which our citizens can ill afford to endure, if we wish to preserve and enhance the good reputation we have already achieved in the matter of school appropriations. The improved method of ventilation, now existing in Nos. 1, 2, 3 and 9, should be adopted in the remainder. It is economic, healthful, comparatively inexpensive, being permanent, without cost after its introduction. The above wants supplied, all the houses will occupy, in structure, healthfulness and comfort, more than an average rank amongst rural communities. A comparatively small appropriation will be sufficient to perfect the improvements suggested.

TEACHERS.

Thirteen teachers have been employed, eight being residents of our town. Resignations necessarily produce vacancies, and although the number from various causes has been larger than usual, the schools have not apparently been seriously disturbed. While it must be conceded that good teachers may be retained in a school longer than is profitable, having partially outlived their usefulness, and some may accomplish their best work during the first or second term, we can but think that the placing of any young, inexperienced stranger upon our role of teachers is an experiment which will not bear repetition, except in unavoidable instances, which, however, are liable to occur at any time.

Your committee have endeavored to use the judgment and discrimination afforded by experience and observation in the selection and approval of teachers. But the field of labor, the School, in its daily sessions, is pre-eminently the place and time to determine the various qualifications required, rather than the period allotted to the preliminary "examination." While it is pleasant to be able to say that all have been conscientious and have manifested a cheerful willingness to perform their respective duties with fidelity, it would be unreasonable to suppose that all should be classed in the same grade in point of excellence and efficiency. Some have received instruction and discipline in the Normal or Training school; some in the school of schools, Experience; and some, it may be, as "teachers are born, not made," have received from kind nature's hand a certain special aptitude for the successful prosecution of the high and responsible duties, and that makes the business the grandest of all achievements of life to them. The civilization of the nineteenth century decidedly protests against that of the seventeenth, and now asserts, most emphatically, that those who pursue this high calling should have not only rare mental endowments, but that they should have the natural or acquired power of appreciating and doing what is required by circumstances, commonly known as tact. The young and inexperienced, however, must be permitted and encouraged to "make their mark," as favorable opportunities are presented.

A few suggestions to the teachers, and the young misses in our schools, who, we trust, will soon be prepared to enter upon the honorable calling, may not be amiss in a school report.

Don't forget the lessons of last year's experience. Don't become discouraged. Be satisfied with small results if they are sure. Don't fail to learn as soon as possible in what direction your pupils need to work, and just where they need to begin. Don't get order in the school room at the expense of growth. Have order, not by all means, but by the best means only. Don't let the year pass without reading some good publications upon education and methods of teaching, if you wish to grow in efficiency and avoid the odium of becoming rusty. Don't omit the visiting day, nor postpone it to the last of the term or year. See other teachers at work. Be sympathetic in your criticisms. Go for help, not for self-satisfaction. Don't allow yourself to become fretful over your work. Be serene. Use your powers to the best advantage, and teach the children to do the same. Don't teach any lesson without knowing why you teach it, and what you hope to accomplish by it. Have a purpose in every lesson. Don't think that inattention is a small matter. Stop work when you fail to hold the attention of your class. Study the art of securing the habit of attention, and see that every lesson tends to strengthen that habit in your pupils. Be active, vigilant, systematic, prompt, that you may neither permit yourself nor pupils to "Drag;" for there is naught more disheartening to pupils, visitors and committee, than a moping, hesitating, half-bewildered, spiritless teacher, who has not sufficient ambition to thoroughly prepare for each-day's work, and who permits so much valuable time to be irretrievably lost by unnecessary delays as to be "unable to attend to all the regular exercises."

The fact that, "as is the teacher, so is the school," is, perhaps, a sufficient apology for the above suggestions.

FREE TEXT-BOOKS.

The copy of the law relative to free text-books will be found on the 34th page. It will be seen that committees, by the new law, may change any or all books in use at the present time. The following is a list of the books now in use, and the date of introduction, so far as we can readily ascertain:—

Reading—New Franklin Series,	1887.
Spelling—Patterson's,	1885.
Grammar—Patterson's,	1885.
Arithmetic, Written—Franklin's,	—.
Arithmetic, Mental—Colburn's Revised,	1886.
Physiology—Brand's,	1884.
Geography—Harper's,	1881.
Copy Books—Harper's,	1886.
Algebra—Robinson's or Greenleaf's,	—.
Book Keeping—Meservey,	—.

Is a change demanded? A good law should not be made unpopular by subjecting the town to unnecessary expense. To prevent a too frequent and expensive change of books, our law wisely provides that no book legally introduced into a school shall be displaced under five years, and that not more than one of the text-books or series on one subject shall be changed in any one year. This provision is suspended by the new law during the first introduction of free text-books, after which the old law revives and will be in full force.

After a careful perusal of several of the most modern publications, we are convinced that we cannot effect a change for the better.—geography, perhaps, excepted. This branch feels the “infirmities of age” more quickly than any other, and it is not unlikely that a change may be wrought the coming season. Changes thus made will not be burdensome to the tax-payers, while a welcome relief will be afforded to many families who have school children.

Charts and outline maps are rightfully considered indispensable in the prosecution of the study of geography and other branches. Hence, your committee have purchased six, two of the schools having been previously supplied. We trust the teachers will see that they are so utilized as to prove the investment judicious.

Geography need not now be taught as a collection of detached and unrelated facts, independent of each other, but may be treated as a science, based upon established principles and applied in the whole course of study. The improvements in methods of teaching generally, which have resulted from the proper application of the principles of mental science to education in all stages of its course, have prepared the way for great improvements in teaching geography. No thoughtful teacher is now satisfied with the process of memorizing dry facts, which once constituted the whole course of instruction in this study.

The conviction is quite strong that geography may be made the means of mental discipline, while at the same time it furnishes the mind with the knowledge necessary for the practical duties of life.

GENERAL CONDITION AND PROGRESS.

A retrospective survey of the work accomplished affords convincing proof that our schools have been rather more than ordinarily successful. No notable frictional disturbances have arisen during the year. Parents as a whole have shown an increased solicitude for the mental welfare of their children by a general spirit of enquiry, if not by an increase of visitation. Profanity, clownishness of manners and language is sensibly lessening in amount, so far as our limited observation and the report of the teachers enable us to decide. The pupils, with rare exceptions, have exhibited a commendable submissiveness to order and control. Very many of the older pupils of both sexes,—would we could include all,—are entitled to much credit for their gentlemanly and ladylike deportment. The government of a school cannot always be determined by a uniform standard of stillness or quietude. The confusion resulting from the unavoidable restlessness of twenty-five or more pupils, must of necessity exceed that of a much smaller number, yet the “order” of the former may be as good or better than the latter.

The various branches have severally received the usual amount of attention. Satisfactory advancement has been attained in most instances, and frequent reviews have been encouraged and practiced.

We have endeavored more than ever to impress upon the mind of the pupil the importance of cultivating the habit of self-reliance, that he may thereby acquire that most essential of all mental aptitudes, that of thinking for himself.

Most of the pupils have worked industriously and perseveringly, and hold an honorable rank as practical arithmeticians. A larger number than usual have completed and reviewed both text books. In some instances we have recommended the omission of the least important portions of the larger work. If a text-book should be published better adapted to meet the wants of common citizenship, ignoring that which is non-practical, we think its adoption should be favored. Very few ever need to apply to any of the purposes of business more than a small part of the principles and rules of calculation taught in the text-books. Every branch of business has its own requirements in this respect, and these are confined within very narrow limits. It is quite certain that much time now spent by many of the older scholars in the study of the more abstruse portions of arithmetic, can be employed more advantageously in the study of United States history, political economy, physiology and our native language.

The signs of the times point most emphatically to the importance of the two former, if our cherished institutions are to be transmitted to posterity unsullied. Oh, who can fathom the responsibilities of the guardians and educators of the rising generation!

We think there is a growing interest in the matter of reading, and hope to see a more full development in the near future. Many children contract faulty habits in the nursery, at home, before and during their school life, which are not easily eradicated in the brief period devoted to the art when transplanted to the school-room. Short lessons, thoroughly studied, often repeated, carefully criticised in pronunciation, articulation and rapidity, form the only true basis for sure progress, and should be so regarded by parents, scholars and teachers. That we have a few quite good readers and a much larger number not as good, need not be demonstrated to those who make occasional visits to the school-room.

Each school, with one exception, is supplied with an unabridged dictionary, the study of which should be encouraged by every possible incentive, for skill in defining indicates good thinking. We have at the present time about one hundred pupils of ten years of age and upwards, and every two or four of this number should be supplied with a smaller book for immediate use at their seats, using the larger one only at the teacher's desk for reference. These, if thought desirable, could be used by the more advanced classes as a definer and speller. In the matter of spelling, many of the teachers have succeeded in arousing a wholesome spirit of emulation, both in written and oral work.

Most of the classes have performed a very creditable amount of work in grammar, and are showing an increased interest, as mental acumen is developed by age and logical thought. We firmly believe that it should be a pervading element in the whole home and school training of the young, to make them use their mother tongue with accuracy and force. Moreover, the close, accurate habits of thought engendered by the critical examination of the English sentence, analytically and synthetically, and the cultivation of keen perception in the correction and criticism of errors of speech, are of incalculable value to the learner as a thinking citizen of the future. We would have the impression indelibly fixed upon the minds of children, that the branch of study or book which helps us most, is that which makes us think most. The text-book now in use embraces all the essentials of the subject, and the facts are presented in such a way as to lay the foundation for the further and higher study of language in all its departments. We are of the opinion, however, that no branch is more dependent upon the living teacher for success, than is grammar.

Physiology has been taught orally in all the schools in a manner that will, perhaps, meet the demands of the law. With the aid of the charts we ought to see more and better work in the future. A small but interesting class was formed in No. 2, using the text-book.

Similar classes might be formed in several of our schools, yet it would seem, all things considered, that an active, ready teacher might do equally as good, if not better work, in engaging the attention of the whole school by short readings from the text-book, coupled with informal talks and questionings.

Composition has been practiced in all our schools, and by each pupil of proper age and attainments. This practice should be encouraged by all rational means, and no parent should interpose objections or grant excuses. It brings into use writing, spelling, punctuation, and the power of expressing thought by written language,—“the flowering out of the mind.”

Declamation has received perhaps as much attention as can reasonably be expected, in conjunction with the many exercises of our ungraded schools. One piece, even if it be short, accurately memorized, is sufficient for practice during a term. A public literary exercise, consisting of declamations, readings and compositions, practiced and written during the term or terms, may be made highly interesting and profitable at the close of each term or school year, as has been suggested by one or more of our teachers. But we deem it inexpedient to recommend even such exhibitions during the time allotted to the term.

The copy books exhibited at the close of each term indicated much care, neatness, and interest in the art of writing. Accuracy in position and the holding of the pen have been faithfully exemplified and diligently required by each teacher.

Algebra and book-keeping have been successfully pursued by as large a number as the attainments and tastes of the pupils seemed to warrant.

There is nothing more important than that children be familiar with the history of their own country, and a spirit of patriotism be awakened within them. This should be taught them in our schools. The best means of awakening an interest in the study of United States history may properly engage the attention of committee, parents and scholars.

Members of the board have visited several schools outside of our town, for the purpose of self-improvement, by observing the methods of teaching and general management. We confess, with no small degree of satisfaction, that our pupils rank as high in scholarship and general demeanor as in most other schools, cities not excepted. Hence, fellow citizens, let us take courage, be hopeful, firm and persevering in the observance of every duty, that our schools may be elevated to that standard of excellence, morally, physically and intellectually, that shall not only receive the approbation of our own consciences, but the benediction of Him who holds and sustains all our destinies.

In conclusion, the senior member of the board, influenced by a duty he owes to himself and possibly to his constituency, deems it expedient to announce his desire to retire from further official connection with our schools, and thus open the way for the selection of some younger person, who is more able to bear the burdens and discharge the duties of the responsible and honorable position.

We trust the female voters will not relax their efforts to be present and participate in the work of the annual school meeting, but manifest an enlarged interest by increase of numbers, as in the past.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives in General Court convened :—

SECTION 1.—The school committee of every city and town shall purchase, at the expense of such city or town, text-books and other supplies used in the public schools; and said text-books and supplies shall be loaned to the pupils of said public schools free of charge, subject to such rules and regulations as to care and custody as the school committee may prescribe; provided, that in purchasing the first supply of text books under this act, the school committee may effect a change in the text-books previously and then in use upon any subject.

SECT. 2. Pupils supplied with text-books at the time of the passage of this act shall not be supplied with similar books by the committee until needed.

SECT. 3. This act shall take effect upon the first day of January, eighteen hundred and ninety.

GEORGE G. ANDREWS,

REPORT

OF THE

Committee on New Valuation of Real Estate.

Your committee chosen at the last annual meeting to examine the real estate in the town of Hudson, and, so far as possible, to equalize the valuation of the same, have attended to the duties committed to their trust.

In submitting this report we beg leave to suggest that, as we had reason to expect, we found our task to be a laborious, responsible and delicate duty.

It is a fact conceded by assessors generally, that an equitable equalization of property for taxation is the most difficult matter connected with the assessment and collection of taxes, and that absolute perfection is an impossibility.

We expect criticism, as there always will be in similar cases.

It is very natural for some people to think—and honestly in many instances—that they are burdened with a higher proportionate tax than some of their neighbors.

Suffice it to say that, while we do not claim perfection or any superior qualifications for the position given us by our fellow citizens, we do have the consciousness of having performed our work faithfully, with strict integrity and impartiality, in each and every instance, with the sole object in view to make a just and true proportionate valuation, based upon the combined judgment of the several members of the committee.

Upon the following pages will be found the names of the resident and non-resident land owners in town, with the number of acres, and our valuation of the real estate owned by each.

We would improve this opportunity to most heartily thank our fellow citizens for their almost universal courtesy and hospitality, and for the kind assistance rendered the committee while in the performance of their duty.

KIMBALL WEBSTER,
GEORGE W. HASELTON, } Committee.
